Dr. Heard currently offers infertility related services to his patients and other areas of reproductive endocrinology such as premature ovarian failure and pediatric/adolescent gynecology. He also has special interests in male factor evaluation and treatment, third party reproduction including donor egg IVF, and gestational surrogacy.

Dr. Heard currently works with residents and fellows affiliated with Baylor College of Medicine Hospital, and University Texas Health Science Center at Hermann Memorial Hospital. He is an active member of the American Society of Reproductive Medicine, and the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists. As the new director, Dr. Heard will bring years of experience in Assisted Reproductive Technology to the new IVF center at Westside to offer patients a host of new services related fertility preservation, pre-implantation genetic diagnosis, and third party reproduction. This unique hospital based laboratory will open the doors to other reproductive endocrinologists and subspecialists that may also benefit from the new facility, ultimately beginning something new in Houston that has not been done before
